Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you grave for me:
Here he lies where he long'd to be;
Home is the sailor, home from sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.

-Robert Louis Stevenson

“ Jim was my neighbor and friend for quite a few years. My oldest daughter played with his Anna...they were always up to something. He enjoyed taking the girls to the nature center and would go a few times a month. On one of their ventures I decided to join them. I could see why he and Anna liked going so much. It was a very cool place. Jim was that neighbor that if you needed a hand with something he was always ready to jump in and help. One year Lee, my husband, decided he was going to build a porch off the back of the house and you guessed it , Jim was there with tools in his hands ready to jump in and help; and good thing, the porch was an ambitious project that required lots of hands. When it was finished about a month later it was beautiful. We all enjoyed it for many years. Thank you Jim for the years of friendship and sheer kindness. I always enjoyed our conversations and laughs. May you Rest In Peace Jim. You will be missed by all the people you touched.
